THE VISUAL DICTIONARY ONLINE NOMINATED FOR BEST EDUCATIONAL WEBSITE IN THE 13th ANNUAL WEBBY AWARDS

MONTREAL, CANADA – April 17 2009 – QA International announced today that The Visual Dictionary Online has been nominated for Best Educational Website in the 13th Annual Webby Awards. Hailed as the "Internet's highest honor" by the New York Times, The Webby Awards is the leading international award honoring excellence on the Internet.

Merriam-Webster, America's most respected language reference publisher, and QA International — a leading developer and producer of visually innovative reference works — have joined forces to introduce a new component to illustrated references on the Web: The Visual Dictionary Online (www.visualdictionaryonline.com).

Its bank of more than 20,000 terms, completed by precise definitions and organized around over 6,000 stunning illustrations, cover a wide variety of objects, animals and phenomenon from all aspects of everyday life. Students can search for illustrated science topics, like nuclear fission or the anatomy of a frog, and curious minds of any kind can type a term like narwhal in the easy index search box to zero in on an illustration of the marine creature with a spiraled, ten-foot tusk. Additional features that enrich your learning experience include a Game of the Week, played by associating words with images, and audio pronunciation of the terminology.

"Publishers today have to answer modern readers needs and provide them with more interactive, dynamic, enjoyable extra content, for us the Web is the perfect platform to do this. Far from competing with the printed edition of the Visual Dictionary, the web-based version is a tool that completes it." explained Caroline Fortin, Publisher and Vice-President of QA International.
